the Association for Environment Conscious Building

Who are we?

The AECB (the Association for Environment Conscious Building) is a network of individuals and companies with a common aim of promoting sustainable building.

We bring together contractors, trades people, self builders, architects, designers, engineers, manufacturers, housing associations, local authorities and academics to develop, share and promote green building best practice.

The AECB's three main roles:

1 supporting and guiding members in improving their knowledge and practice of environmentally-conscious design and construction since 1989

2 capturing experience, insights, exemplar practice and hard data on building performance from the pioneers, early adopters, and expert practitioners in the AECB community

3 sharing this valuable feedback with the full membership, the wider industry and the general public, through publications, events, training courses, databases, design and construction guidance and energy standards

The AECB is a 'not-for-profit membership organisation' and all of our core activities are funded by membership fees.

We pride ourselves on our independence, relevance and practicality. We have in excess of 1,000 individual and organisation members, and we reach many thousands of interested and committed people via our events, training and printed and social media, in the UK, Ireland and internationally.

Why join the AECB?

be part of the UK's largest green building community – we focus on society's need to build better buildings and to dramatically improve the performance of existing buildings, in the context of energy security, climate change and peoples' health and wellbeing.
